Abstract

A computer-and-network based system and method for conducting efficient, third-party-free, direct commercial transactions between qualified purchasers and vendors. Pre-established and pre-agreed-upon relational transactional protocols, which can be 5   selectively revised as necessary by participants, substitute for conventional third-party intermediary activities, such as credit approval and authorization activities.